

Prospect Law Writing Opportunity

Are you a student passionate about renewable energy and ESG and the role these can play in achieving Net Zero targets?

We have an exciting opportunity for you to showcase your writing skills and gain valuable exposure to professionals who work in these sectors. Join our writing competition and get a chance to have your articles published on the Prospect Law website.

At Prospect Law, we believe in the power of young minds and fresh perspectives. We are dedicated to giving the next generation a platform to voice their views and shape the trajectory towards a greener, more sustainable world. By participating in this competition, you will have the chance to share your insights, innovative solutions, and thought-provoking analyses on key topics related to renewable energy, nuclear energy, ESG, and the environment.

What You Get:

- Have your articles published under your name on a prestigious platform.
- Get your name on public blogs, increasing your visibility and credibility.
- Gain a head start above your peers in the sector.
- Be at the forefront of our list of paralegals and technical experts we use on projects.
- Connect with a senior team of legal and technical specialists including Prospect's Partners, Edward de la Billiere and Edmund Robb and Rory Tait, Head of Renewables.

Competition Details:

- Submit a blog of 600 -1,000 words on one of this year's chosen topics:
 - "What's holding back the role of renewable energy in achieving the UK's NetZero targets?"
 - "Discuss the role of technological advancements, such as energy storage solutions and smart grids, in overcoming the limitations of renewable energy and enhancing its reliability."
 - "Analyse the challenges and opportunities of transitioning from fossil fuels to renewable energy sources in the transportation sector, with a focus on electric vehicles and sustainable mobility."
- The top 5 articles will be selected for publication on our website and provided with further opportunities.
- Open to under-graduates and post-grads alike.
